PREFACE

Indexing a series of records is a long-drawn-out and tedious process, but the indexer is sustained by the knowledge that his work will be of service to, and his tenacity blessed by, future generations of administrators and scholars, who will have occasion to consult his volume. A modern index can be compared to a city's local Directory which helps to locate the desired information in a huge mass of records. Viewed from this stand-point, the necessity for, and the value of, a good and exhaustive index to the records for purposes of search can hardly be questioned.

The records of the Government of India have manuscript indexes which were prepared contemporaneously with the records, but they are quite different from modern subject indexes, being in reality only diaries of records arranged under a few general heads and, as such, are of little help in facilitating the work of a growing number of investigators. Moreover, inadequate as they are, they are not continuous, nor do they cover all series of records. Again, the manuscript index has only one copy and the research scholar, when he asks for it, often finds himself forestalled. The Government of India, in order to solve these problems, adopted in 1923 a scheme for preparing modern indexes for the pre-1859 records in the custody of the National Archives of India. The work could not be started immediately as it was decided to complete first the classification of these same records—a work which had been undertaken on the recommendation of the Indian Historical Records Commission. Early in 1940 the classification was completed and the indexing, so long deferred, was taken up. This was a new venture and it was considered advisable to prepare specimen indexes to a small series—the Land Revenue Records, 1830-59—by way of experiment. Accordingly, two volumes of indexes were prepared on lines approved by the Indian Historical Records Commission and published in 1940 and 1942 respectively. The result proved very satisfactory, and the utility of the modern system of indexing records was established beyond doubt. It was then decided to take up the indexing of the records of the late Foreign and Political Department. The present volume which covers the period 1756-1780 is the first in that series. It was begun during the Directorship of Dr S. N. Sen but could not, on account of the long period covered, be completed till this year. It is hoped that it will fulfil the expectations of the sponsors of the scheme and furnish its readers with all the help which the earlier Land Revenue Records Indexes had led them to expect. A few defects are inevitable, but it may be noted that, when we started, we were still in the experimental stage. We hope to improve and it shall be our earnest endeavour to publish the volumes in this series regularly and at short intervals.

INTRODUCTION

The present volume covers the following records series for the periods noted against each :

- I. Select Committee (1756-62 ; 1765-74)
- II. Secret and Separate Department (1761-62 ; 1773-74)
- III. Secret Department (1763-65 ; 1768-80)
- IV. Secret Department of Inspection (1770 ; 1778)

Siraj-ud-Daulah's capture of Calcutta was followed by the escape of Governor Drake and most of the members of the Bengal Council to Falta on 20 June 1756. There the Council continued to meet on board the Fort William. Towards the middle of August, however, "finding it difficult to preserve any secrecy as to their intentions", they appointed a Secret Committee. The first meeting of this Committee was held on 22 August 1756 on board the Phoenix and the last consultation is dated 10 December of the same year. Their functions were taken over by a Select Committee nominated by the Court of Directors in their letter dated 11 February 1756 which was received in Calcutta on 12 December 1756. This Select Committee was directed "to transact affairs with the country Government and neighbouring powers, also with Ye French, Dutch and other Europeans, and in general to take such measures as shall best conduce to the protection and preservation of the Company's estate, rights and privileges in Bengal."⁽¹⁾

The records of the Falta Secret Committee, though not strictly belonging to the Select Committee, are grouped under the latter.

The Select Committee records are not continuous. One group of records (1756-62) practically covers the period of the Seven Years' War. Another group is from May 1765 to October 1774, when the Select Committee was dissolved.

The Select Committee Proceedings are contained in 24 original consultations and 26 folio volumes. Included within these are two folio volumes of letters from the Court of Directors or their Secret Committee, 1756-71, three folio volumes of letters issued during 1765, 1767 and 1768, a folio volume of letters received between December 1771 and November 1772 and another of miscellaneous letters for 1768.

The records of the Select Committee present an excellent narrative of the military and political situation in India of that time. Some of the more interesting items mentioned in the index are—the deception practised on Omichand ; the treaty with Mir Qasim ; the farman for the Diwani of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa ; the treaty with Nizam Ali Khan ; the Maratha occupation of Delhi ; and the politics of Shuja-ud-Daulah.

The Secret Department was created by the Board of Fort William in December 1763 but there was a break for a short period from May 1765 to

(1) Hons Department Letters from Court, 1755-58, pp. 95-96.

August 1768 during which the Select Committee took over its functions. The Secret Department was reconstituted in that year and was at first only a branch of the Public Department, being created in order to take over some of the latter's increasing responsibilities. It dealt with military affairs, all transactions with the country Government, with Madras and Bombay, with the British Residents, with foreign powers—in short, political matters generally as opposed to trade, revenue etc., and secret matters which did not come under the purview of the Select Committee. It was not organized as a separate Department with its own Secretary and staff until 20 years later.

Some of the chief subjects covered by the Secret Department records are (a) circumstances leading to the battle of Buxar; (b) dismissal of Muhammad Riza Khan and Shitab Rai; (c) Hastings' early administrative reforms; (d) expedition against Cooh Behar; (e) cession of Kora and Allahabad to the Nawab Vazir; (f) the Rohilla War; (g) mission to Bhutan and Tibet; (h) Nand Kumar's accusations against Hastings; (i) war with the Poona Darbar; (j) relations with the Nawab of Arcot; (k) clashes with the French factories in Bengal; and (l) the constant friction between Warren Hastings and Philip Francis.

The Secret and Separate Department was created in 1761 in order to deal with certain exceptional questions as they arose, and, therefore, its records are not continuous. Some of the questions discussed are the mis-conduct of Ramcharan Rai, the maladministration of Shitab Rai, and the black-marketing of rice during the famine by Muhammad Riza Khan.

The Secret Department of Inspection was constituted in 1766 by Clive for suppressing abuses among the Company's servants and curtailing unnecessary expenses in the civil and military establishments. Two documents of 1770 and one of 1778 are the only records of this Department which fall within the period covered by this Index.

In transliterating Indian place-names the Imperial Gazetteer of India and the Provincial Gazetteers have been mainly followed. When, however, a particular name was not available in the gazetteers, the Century Atlas spelling has been accepted. Oriental words have generally been transliterated according to Wilson's Glossary of Judicial and Revenue Terms. They have been printed in italics, as also the names of ships, newspapers and books.

The references cited after the entries are to the series, the date, the month, the year and the number of the original consultation in that order. For example, S 1 Jan. 76(1) indicates Secret Department, 1st January, 1776, Consultation No. 1. When only the series and the year are given, the figure within the brackets indicates the page number of the volume, and when duplicate volumes exist, the volume number is printed in bold Arabic numerals and then follows the page number of that volume e.g. SC 70(2) stands for Select Committee, 1770, page 2, and SC 68(8, 9, 10, 12) stands for Select Committee, 1768, volume number 8, page 9, and volume number 10, page 12.

The headings have been arranged alphabetically and the entries under them chronologically. But chronological order has been broken, when necessary, to bring analogous subjects together. The years cited after the names of persons indicate merely the years in which those persons are mentioned in the records indexed.

When there are too many entries under a heading they have been grouped under suitable sub-headings arranged alphabetically. In the same way subheadings have been divided into subordinate sub-headings. These last have been italicised. Entries under the subordinate sub-headings are related both to the headings and the sub-headings. A preposition governs a sub-heading but a personal pronoun or possessive adjective refers to the main heading. For example when the main heading is "Muhammad Ali" and the sub-heading is "Tipu," and an entry under it reads "his relations with," it means Muhammad Ali's relations with Tipu. Where the above do not occur, the entries have been worded in such a manner that there is no scope for ambiguity.

The condition and distinguishing features of the individual papers have been indicated by means of italicised letters in round brackets, thus—

- (1) Discrepancies between three classes of documents (i.e., Original Consultations, Proceedings Volumes and Body-Sheets) in the matter of dates, spellings of names, and/or omissions, by (a).
- (2) Paper damaged, defective, unsigned by the writer, illegible, stamped with seal, by (b).
- (3) Paper signed by the Governor-General as a Member of the Board by (c). When it bears his original signature, by (A); and if it is entirely written by him, by (H).
- (4) Original Consultation or Proceedings Volume missing, by (d).
- (5) Duplicate available, by (e).
- (6) Resolution of the Board recorded on the Original Consultation, by (f).
- (7) Concurrence of the Governor-General or a Member of the Board in a draft, etc., by (g).
- (8) Matter recorded in the Body-Sheet only, by (h).

A glossary has been given at the end to explain obsolete, unfamiliar or non-English words occurring in the documents. A list of abbreviations and contractions used will be found on pp. xi and xii.
